Response #2: The Engineer's estimate of project construction cost is $9.3 million.

Question #3: How long can the booster pump station be taken out of service?

Response #3: The pump station can not be taken out of service completely at any time and will need temporary means of power while the electrical equipment is being transitioned. Work restrictions will be further clarified in Addenda 2.

Question #4: Will the current tank project contractor install a pup and fitting downstream of the wye?

Response #4: No, see detail 1 on sheet C19.

Question #5: What is the maximum length for flushing/testing main installation?

Response #5: The maximum flushing/testing length is 2,000 LF per AWWA standards.

Question #7: With the potential of disturbing existing thrust blocks during construction piping in front of the C-tank site, will the existing piping remain in service while constructing the adjacent transmission main? If so, what is the system pressure?

Response #7: The system pressure at this location is controlled by the tank head and will be low. When the pump station is on, it adds approximately 20 psi.

Question #8: How long can the tanks be offline?

Response #8: The tanks can be taken offline for night work only. This will be further clarified in Addenda 2.
